Teens Driven to Distraction

Passengers and cell phones play bigger role in car crashes involving teen drivers

Passengers and cell phones play a bigger role than thought when it comes to car crashes involving teen drivers (ages 16-19) according to a new safety study. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration had previously estimated that distractions of all kinds were a factor in only 14 percent of all teen driver crashes. The new study revealed that driver distraction was a factor in 58 percent of crashes; especially accidents in which vehicles ran off the road (89%) or had rear-end collisions (76%).

The AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety analyzed nearly 1,700 videos that capture the actions of teen drivers in the moments before a crash. It found that distractions were a factor in nearly 6 of 10 moderate to severe crashes. That's four times the rate in many previous official estimates that were based on police reports.

The study is unusual because researchers rarely have access to crash videos that clearly show what drivers were doing in the seconds before impact as well as what was happening on the road. AAA was able to examine more than 6,842 videos from cameras mounted in vehicles, showing both the driver and the simultaneous view out the windshield.

The most common forms of distraction leading to a teen driver crash include:

- 15% - Interacting with one or more passengers
- 12% - Using a cell phone
- 10% - Looking for something in the vehicle
- 9% - Looking at something outside the vehicle
- 8% - Singing/dancing to music
- 6% - Grooming
- 6% - Reaching for an object

Even with this data Florida is still one of 21 states that does not have a teen ban on texting or holding a phone while driving. Florida is also one of 4 states that does not limit the number of passengers that a teen may have in the car with them while driving. The majority of states only allow one passenger under the age of 20.

AAA noted that in 2013 about 963,000 drivers ages 16 to 19 were involved in police-reported crashes in the United States and that these crashes resulted in 383,000 injuries and 2,865 deaths.

Parents are a powerful influence on their children and the type of driver they will become. We encourage you to talk to your teen about driving dangers, setting rules and understanding consequences. On our website under Resources, we have provided parents with a helpful distracted driving video and an informative distracted driving brochure. ■

We Are Proud to be Trial Attorneys

We are proud to be trial attorneys and to help our clients when they need it most. As our firm embarks on the beginning of its second decade, we continue to handle personal injury and wrongful death matters from start to finish – whether it is in pre-litigation or in litigation (having to file a lawsuit).

Over the last ten (10) years of our practice, we have seen firsthand the extremely aggressive claims handling practices of the auto insurance companies. Part of the reason is that those publicly traded companies have – in the past – taken a beating in the financial markets, and they have stockholders to report to. In turn, reserves for paying valid claims have been greatly reduced and claims tactics such as “Deny, Delay, and Defend” have become the new normal.

To add fuel to the fire, there has been an increase of lawyer advertisements on TV, radio, internet and billboards. Ads that boast the dollar figure of settlements can turn off even the most open-minded individuals. Even tasteful lawyer advertisements have led to an unfair, negative public perception of lawyers and their clients who bring personal injury claims.

Handling personal injury claims is more challenging than ever before. The days of resolving a case for a fair amount pre-litigation are limited, and firms – like ours who are committed to serving our clients – must often file lawsuits to achieve justice and fair results for our clients.

Our firm has grown tremendously over the last ten (10) years. We are proud of what we and our staff have accomplished for our clients. It is no wonder that our highest referral source is satisfied, past clients. ■

Kids in Hot Cars

Most Deaths Occur When A Caregiver Forgets

It is never okay to leave kids in a car – even with a window open. There is no safe amount of time to leave children alone in the car. Even just a few minutes can prove fatal.

Since 1998, more than 600 children have died from heat stroke because they were left in cars on warm days, according to KidsAndCars.org. An average of 38 children die each year from this preventable tragedy. More than 70% of deaths occur in children under the age of 2.

The most dangerous mistake a parent or caregiver can make is to think it cannot happen to them or their family.

For tips on preventing and keeping your kids safe from heatstroke, KidAndCars.org recommends the following helpful information on their website at: <http://www.kidsincars.org/heatstroke.html>.

Parents should be on alert for cars that might have an unattended child left inside. If you see a child alone in a car be sure to call 911 and help make sure the child gets out as soon as possible. ■
